Approved For Release 1999/09/16 : CIA-RDP63-00314R000200170026-6

1. Adverse features of geography.
2. Alliances between countries effective when in harmony with geographical facts.
3. Geographic access leads to attack.
4. What constitutes a pertinent geographical fact, and what does not, is a matter of determination. Avenue of approach a neutral fact - whether or not accessibility constitutes a danger is dependent on political factors.
5. Geographic knowledge req'd. to to guide a bomber or a guided missile to target is exacting in detail.

   Approach route affected by prevailing winds, wind pressure patterns, temperature, height of tropopause, fog, cloud cover & other weather data; affected by distance between bases & targets as modified, for the calculation of flying time, by prevailing wind, and suitability or actual use of territory between bases & targets for warning and defense systems. Magnetic anomalies - exact location or lack of it.

6. Size - location - relation to other states mere size is not power.
   size becomes a factor of weakness if the territory exceeds a nations capability of development.
7. Effective systems of communication to maintain centra

Approved For Release 1999/09/16 : CIA-RDP63-00314R000200170026-6

Approved For Release 1999/09/16 : CIA-RDP63-00314R000200170026-6

8. Effective size of states must be measured against the prevailing state of technology —
9. Space in depth needed in addition to industrial capacity, natural resources.
10. Location —

Approved For Release 1999/09/16 : CIA-RDP63-00314R000200170026-6